POLICE ORGANIZATION

RECEIVED G/2 W.D. MAR 30 1936

The internal organization of the office of the Chief of Police includes the Chief and Sub-Chief, four Chiefs of Division called Inspector Generals and a Secretary General.

The Divisions are the following: Safety Division; Investigations Division; Judicial Division; Administrative Division. Each of these divisions assumes its own function, like the Secretariat General; thus the Safety Division includes all matters pertaining to the uniformed police and safety services; the Investigations Division fulfills the preventive and repressive function of secret police and laboratory; the Judicial Division takes charge of all matters concerning the relations of the police with the administration of Justice; the Administrative Division is in charge of all that concerns the investment of funds, purchase of material, furniture, equipment, etc.; the General Secretariat is in charge of all that concerns appointments, leaves and dismissals of personnel; sanitation, archives, offices, etc.

The diagram with the organization and rules and regulations for 1932, modified by subsequent provisions of simple detail, make it possible to obtain an accurate idea of the Argentine metropolitan system.

(SEE DIAGRAM)

The sectional commissariats (district police stations) are dependencies of the Safety Division and are distributed in police districts. They exercise the double function of preventive and repressive police. The Comisario or Superintendent of Police District, is the direct representative of the Chief of Police and has all the attributes and obligations conferred and imposed upon him by laws and decrees of the Government, inasmuch as this department, as an administrative institution, carries out the orders of the National Executive Power through the Ministry of the Interior, and, as a judicial institution, is subordinated to the stipulations of the pertinent Codes and Laws, the fulfilment of which has been entrusted to it.

For this reason, the district police stations or Comisarios represent the first force of action capable of imposing due obedience and respect towards the rights of the people, by insuring safety, order and progress relative to social activities, the police being an institution to promote order.

For this service the different sections of police are formed as follows: 1 Superintendent of Police District (Comisario); 1 Assistant Superintendent (Sub-Comisario); 3 Auxiliaries; 3 Inspectors; 3 Aids, Clerks or Employess; 3 Telegraph Operators; 1 Day Officer and 2 or more Clerks of lower rank for assistance in the offices, one employee occupied solely with municipal documents; external service is effected with the necessary police forces for each duty, distributed in three turns or shifts, called "Thirds" (Tercios) in the charge of an Inspector and a Sergeant, with petty officers and as many policemen as may be necessary to cover the different posts of the district entrusted to their care. The Inspector is the immediate chief of the "Third"; the Sergeant is the 2nd chief and both of these, following different schedules, make inspections of policemen at their posts, general vigilance of the district, repression of evil elements, etc.

The Auxiliaries, with an Aid, Clerk or Employee and a Telegraph Operator, are in charge of the internal service in three shifts on varying schedules; the Auxiliaries are the chiefs of the guard and handle all cases that may come up, adopt such preventive and legal measures as may be advisable before the crime or transgressions committed, organize the filing of proceedings and carry out and control the work which the other police services may demand. In these tasks, the Auxiliary is seconded by the Aid whom he directs in all procedures of minor importance. In the absence of the Superintendent and Assistant Superintendent of Police District, he remains in charge of the station, it then being his duty to provide such precautionary measures as may be necessary for the better fulfilment of the function entrusted to him.

There is a corporal and three policemen for the service of prevention, or guard, for the task of attending prisoners, watching over the premises, and carrying out whatever orders are given. This body of guards serve in two turns of 24 hours each, with short rests during the night if the requirements of the service so permit.

The guard service of employees is made in three turns with daily relief and variable schedules from 11 to 19 o'clock; 19 to 7 o'clock; and 7 to 11 o'clock; with the exception of Auxiliaries who do not serve between 7 and 11 o'clock, and are replaced by an Assistant Officer.

"Thirds" are on weekly service between 6 and 14 o'clock; from 14 to 22 o'clock and from 22 to 6 o'clock, with additional work on Sunday for "thirds" on the morning and night shift, in order that those who work in the afternoon of the previous Saturday may be free.

There are 46 sectional police stations (comisarías seccionales) and for their inspection by the District Inspector, they are grouped into 4 zones comprising 10, 12 and 14 sectional stations. Each one of these districts is in the charge of an Inspector entrusted with functions of superintendent and control of all the services, who watches over the strict fulfilment of instructions issued by the authorities.

The Day Officer, in the police station, is in charge of administrative functions such as those of a secretariat; he is in charge of the books, depot, equipment, etc., apart from his duties as policeman. He is designated from among those who form the personnel of the section.

ARGENTINA (Population and Social Conditions)
Subject: Police System

The safety police is reenforced by two bodies which also are under the orders of the Safety Division: The Body of Mounted Police and the Body of Guards of Security (Infantry); the latter includes special services for the use of tear gas and assault companies. Security services are completed with the Traffic Section, including patrols of motorcyclists and automobiles with radio-telephone equipment connected with the Radio and Alarm Service under the orders of the same Division and on the Communications section, with sub-sections of Pigeons and Dogs.
